Filibuster on Re-Organization Bill Looms in Senate

Angry Squabble in Upper House Heard Over the Measure

Senators Robinson and O'Mahony Clash During Debate

VETO LAND BANK BILL

State Supreme Court Refuses to Rehear Highway Bond Suit

WASHINGTON—(AP)—An angry parliamentary squabble during a senate debate on the new court bill led Monday to charges and denials that a filibuster on the measure was actually underway.

Senator O'Mahony, Democrat of Wyoming, asserted that Democratic Leader Joe T. Robinson was "endeavoring to throttle debate on the most fundamental issue presented to the senate in two generations."

Robinson asked O'Mahoney if he didn't know when he invoked the anti-filibuster rule that a "filibuster was in progress and that efforts were being made to abuse the privilege of debate."

Veto's Interest Bill
WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Roosevelt vetoed Monday the bill to extend for two years low interest rates on federal land bank loans.

In a message to the house he said the veto was based on a general lowering of farm mortgage interest rates and an increase of ability of farmers to pay interest during the fiscal year 1938.

The bill would have broadened field loans on which interest rates would have been reduced from 5 to 4 per cent.

Refuses to Hear Suit
LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The Arkansas Supreme Court Monday refused to rehear the suit challenging the validity of Governor Carl E. Bailey's $150,000,000 highway bond refinancing suit.

By a four to three decision the tribunal five weeks ago upheld constitutionality of legislation enacted by the 1937 legislature to carry out the financial move.

The court was divided similarly on the rehearing motion.

Sam Robinson, attorney for W. G. Scoville, who challenged the program, said that he expected to take the fight to the United States Supreme Court.

"Duns Me Wrong," Says Mae West

At last Frank Wallace (above) has forced buxom Mae West, to admit she was married to him in 1911. She acknowledged the often denied marriage in answer to his suit to compel her to recognize him as her legal spouse and for a division of her "community property." She denies she ever lived with him as a wife.

Mae West Plans to Sue for Divorce

Actress, However, Remains in Seclusion as Reports Circulate

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Reports circulated in film circles that buxom Mae West was planning to file suit for divorce from Frank Wallace, New York actor she married in 1911. The actress remained in seclusion.

Mae's business manager, corpulent, white-haired James F. Timony, has conferred with District Attorney Burton Fitts, ostensibly concerning reports from New York that Wallace might sue Timony for alienating Miss West's affections.

Lloyd Wright and Charles E. Milliken, attorneys for Miss West and Timony, admitted they held a conference Saturday with Fitts, but they declined to say what they discussed.

On various occasions Timony has been mentioned by Wallace's attorney, Samuel J. Siegel, regarding Wallace's 1916 marriage to Miss Ray Blakesley. Wallace contends his marriage to Miss Blakesley was undertaken while he believed Miss West had divorced him. He said when he learned the screen actress was still his legal wife, he obtained an annulment of the marriage to Miss Blakesley.

Avery B. Blount, local counsel for Wallace, is preparing new affidavits upon which to base a request for a subpoena ordering Miss West to appear for questioning regarding her married life with Wallace. She claims she was a "kissless bride," that she never lived with him as his wife. Wallace contends she lived with him for four years.

Miss West denied at various times she was ever married to Wallace. Last Wednesday she publicly admitted she married him in Milwaukee, April 11, 1911.

French Taught by Aroma
SHANGHAI, China—(AP)—There is a bar in Shanghai that offers visiting American sailors a little education along with their beer.

The proprietor once was a navy man and he still is interested in gobs. When they ask him the meaning of the "chez" and "chez" they find all over Frenchtown, he explains that "chez" is French for "the house of."

To make it easier, he decided to put up such a sign himself. Unfortunately no one in the navy or elsewhere knows him by name but only by his unexplained nickname, Smell Bad. So the sign had to read "Chez Smell Bad."

Death Toll in Steel Dispute Climbs to Total of 15

141 MEN ARRESTED

Are Held for Suspicion and Disorderly Conduct

MASSILON, Ohio.—Two men died Monday of bullet wounds received in a clash between police and strikers near a steel workers' organizing committee headquarters here, bringing the toll to 15 dead in the seven-week-old steel strike.

Six other persons were wounded. Police said Monday that they had arrested 141 men, charging them with suspicion and disorderly conduct, and holding them for charges during an investigation.

Fulgencio Calzada, native of Mexico, and a former Republic mill employee, was the first to die.

Nick Valdes, 45, died with a bullet wound in the abdomen several hours after the fighting occurred.

Plans went forward for reopening the last major units of steel mills closed by strike which at the height made 100,000 men idle in seven states.

Traffic Violators Brought to Court

Several Liquor Cases Are Heard Monday in Long Session of Court

A dozen persons were arraigned in municipal court here Monday on charges of violating highway traffic regulations and for failure to obtain driver's license.

Charges were filed by State Rangers Sweeney Copeland and Emmet Whitten. The results:

Minor Polk, operating a car without rear light and failure to obtain driver's license, dismissed on payment of cost.

Wilbur Haynes, operating a car without driver's license, dismissed on payment of cost.

Similar cases were brought against Henry Johnson, W. W. Stone, Jimmie Davis, D. H. Jones, Norman Lewis, Berry Faulkner, Irving Burke, and J. C. Howe.

Leo Webb pleaded guilty to fighting Bertha Lee Davis and was fined $25.

A charge of assault and battery against Otto Foster was dismissed.

Elmore Shaw was acquitted on a charge of assault and battery.

Officers Comb Oklahoma Territory for Three Desperadoes

OKLAHOMA CITY—(AP)—The search for three escaped Texas convicts reported to have robbed a filling station near Ardmore Saturday apparently has petered out in two sections of Oklahoma.

A squad of state and county officers patrolled the Ardmore vicinity throughout the night but reported no further trace of the trio, which includes Roy (Pete) Traxler, former Oklahoma desperado.

The search also was fruitless in the vicinity of Hammon, Okla., near the Texas-Oklahoma border, where a man who claimed to be an acquaintance of Traxler said he saw the fugitive contact with two other men Saturday.

Undersheriff J. B. McCullar, Ardmore, said the men who robbed the filling station near there were driving a green sedan which Captain Lee Miller of the Texas state highway patrol said was stolen at Big Sandy, Texas, by Traxler and Charlie Chapman, another of the fugitives.

Fighting Renewed by China, Japan

Rattle of Machine Guns Heard in Arga West of Peiping

PEIPING, China.—(AP)—The rattle of machine guns Monday told Peiping that the five-day battle between Chinese and Japanese troops along the Yungting river, 10 miles west of the city, had resumed.

The Japanese government announced more troops were being rushed to the North China zone of conflict, where Chinese and Japanese soldiers have been locked in intermittent but bloody combat since Wednesday night.

The high command, acting with its accustomed speed and decision, dispatched one of its most trusted commanders, Lieut. Gen. Kiyoshi Katsuki, by airplane to take command of Japanese forces in North China.

These decisions were made public after a day of conferences, in which the highest military and political leaders of the realm laid their views on the Peiping crisis before the Emperor.

Germans to Eat More Fish
BERLIN—(AP)—Germany's economy campaign has led to the opening of kitchens in many cities to teach women how to cook fish.

"Germany must become a nation of fish eaters," the newspapers argue. "An immense capital swims in our lakes and rivers, waiting for the fisherman's nets to exploit it for the nation's needs."

But unless hausfrau can serve up fish in a variety of delicious dishes, officials fear that this aspect of the large-scale drive to make the rich self-sufficient may fail. Hence the kitchens.

Another Russian Plane Winging Its Way Across Ocean

Plane Carrying Three Heads Across Polar Seas to U. S.

SAN FRANCISCO GOAL

Good Weather Is Forecast; Follows Flight of Three Weeks Ago

MOSCOW, Russia.—(AP)—An airplane, thundering toward the United States in a second Soviet attempt to span the roof of the world by air, headed Monday across the polar sea.

The Soviet air ace, Mikhail Gromoff and two companions, hopped off at 3:10 a. m. Monday and left the continent of Europe behind at 4 a. m.

Their destination is San Francisco.

Good weather was forecast for the flight. The Soviet north pole radio station predicted excellent flying conditions all along the route.

Gromoff is regarded as one of Soviet Russia's best long distance flyers.

Follows Recent Feat
Gromoff's flight comes within three weeks of that made over the north pole by three Russian aviators who landed at Vancouver, Wash., June 20. Those three, Valeri Cherkaloff, Georgi Baidukoff and Alexander Beliakoff, passed directly over the north pole near which the Soviet government has established a scientific camp.

It was first reported that Gromoff's destination might be Chicago.

Another plane expected to make a flight over arctic areas is to be piloted by Sigismund Levanevsky, who attempted a trans-polar flight from Moscow to San Francisco in August, 1935, but was forced to turn back when the plane developed trouble.

Gromoff was the regular pilot of the big Russian airplane Maxim Gorky, but was not aboard it when the ship crashed in May, 1935, killing 49 persons.

Quiet Departure
With a minimum of ostentation and farewells, the three fliers took off from Tschelkovo field, about 35 miles outside Moscow.

Flying with Gromoff are Co-Pilot Andrei Yumoshoff, and Sergei Danilin, navigator.

Their plane is identical with that used by Cherkaloff on the recent hop to the United States.

The fliers said they would hop over the pole and continue toward the west coast of the United States, flying as far as possible.

Foreign newspaper correspondents were permitted to witness the takeoff. Gromoff and the other fliers were dressed in brown-leather flying suits.

They were given a farewell from Prof. Otto J. Schmidt, leader of the Soviet expedition to the north pole, and others gathered at the airport.

The new flight is sponsored by Schmidt's department, United States Ambassador Joseph E. Davis was invited to attend the takeoff but bade farewell to the fliers earlier.

Thunder Showers Break Heat Wave

Heavy Rains Reported in Kansas—Death Toll Mounts to 337

By the Associated Press
Thunder showers brought relief Monday to many sections of the nation sweltering in protracted heat wave that has left 337 dead.

Heavy rains were reported in two Kansas areas and thunderstorms in scattered sections. Despite indications off other thunderstorms, forecasters said the unseasonably high temperatures would continue in most sections.

Meteorologists said the current heat was following a path almost identical to that of the 1936 siege which lasted eight days.

McCaskill Man Is New Forest Ranger

J. O. Harris to Patrol Forest District Near McCaskill

Announcement has been made by the Arkansas State Forestry commission of the appointment of J. O. Harris of McCaskill as Forest Ranger of the newly developed forest district near McCaskill.

Mr. Harris has had considerable experience in forestry work having worked with the late J. D. Eley, Mr. Harris' duties are primarily fire protection and fire suppression.

In order that a most up to date protection system might be developed in this area extensive plans are being made for a network of telephone lines and in all probability a 100 foot lookout tower will be constructed in this vicinity.

It has also been announced that the annual forestry festival will be held this year at Delight. Contests will be held with prizes for the winners. Supper will be served on ground and the night meeting will consist of a picture show and talks by various forestry officials.

Body Is Identified As That of His Son

Youth Found Dead in Kansas Was Morrilton Resident

COFFEYVILLE, Kas.—(AP)—William Lamb of Morrilton, Ark., identified the body of a man found in the railroad yards here July 7 as that of his son, William Earl Lamb 20.

Dr. W. S. Hudiburg, Montgomery county attorney, called a jury for an inquest Tuesday afternoon, and County Attorney Clement H. Hall asked Wichita, Kas., authorities to seek information from two youths with whom the elder Lamb said his son left home June 18.

The father said his son left home with $12 in cash, headed for the Kansas harvest fields. No money was on the body when it was found in a clump of weeds with a sweater drawn tightly around the throat and the skull fractured in three places. The youth apparently had been dead several days when found.

WAS UNAVOIDABLE

Sheriff Says Woman Drove Car Into Ditch in Effort to Avoid Mishap

J. M. Deaton, 66, of near Emmet, was struck and instantly killed by an automobile at 8 a. m. Monday about one mile northeast of Gurdon on paved highway 67.

His son, J. W. Deaton, was an eye witness to the accident.

Father and son were en route to Arkadelphia where young Deaton was to enroll as a student in Henderson State Teachers college. They stopped their car on the right side of the road about a mile north of Gurdon.

Walked Into Car's Path
Report said that Deaton walked from behind the automobile toward a filling station across the highway, stepping into the path of an automobile headed west toward Hope.

The car was driven by a woman who gave her name as Miss Sarasin, third street, Little Rock. The car also was occupied by another woman whose name was not learned.

They stopped to render aid, but Deaton was dead when picked up from the highway. He sustained head injuries and a broken left leg.

Sheriff A. N. Shaw said that Miss Sarasin swerved her car into a ditch in an effort to avoid striking Deaton. Sheriff Shaw said the accident was unavoidable.

Services Postponed
A Hope Furniture company undertaker went to the scene and brought the body here. Funeral services had not been completed early Monday afternoon.

Mr. Deaton was well known, having lived near Emmet 20 years. He resided on a farm two miles southwest of Emmet on old Highway 67.

Surviving are his widow, five sons, Virgil of Little Rock, Arnold of Gurdon, J. W. Deaton, Guy, and Claude Deaton of Emmet; seven daughters, Mrs. E. T. Mullins of Gurdon, Mrs. Olin O'Steen of Kilgore, Tex.; Mrs. Catherine Breed of Emmet, Mrs. Coy Snell of Emmet, Mrs. Alta Jacobs and Mrs. Fay Woodruff, both of Corpus Christi, Texas, and Mrs. Gladys McMillan of Emmet.

Three brothers, Bud Deaton of Curtis, Ark., Edward and George Deaton of Springfield, Ark., five sisters, Nando Deaton of Dallas, Mrs. Cordelia Rutledge of Arkadelphia, Mrs. Lulu Greason, Mrs. Lucile Holloway and Mrs. Nannie Tucker, all three of Curtis, Ark.

Good Neighbor Creed Needed Within Nation

THERE has been many a march on Washington, from the British invasion in the War of 1812 down to the "bonus army" of 1932; but there never was one with quite that heart-in-the-throat quality that goes with the present descent of the Boy Scouts of America.

Twenty-five thousand of these lads have taken possession of the city. They are not there to seek any favors or exert any pressure; they are simply a bunch of healthy, whilly admirable American boys out to have a good time, to see their country's capital and, just incidentally, to show what a fine set of boys this country can produce. And it does one good to see them down there.

There is something about a Scout Jamboree of this kind that makes a thoughtful adult feel just a little bit ashamed of himself. These youngsters are still free from those traits of jealousy, suspicion, and ill-will which somehow seem to beset all grownups who go to Washington.

X X X

IN the Scout troops there are all sorts of boys from city slums and boys from small towns, boys whose fathers are wealthy and boys whose fathers are distressingly poor. Twenty years from now these boys will be more or less what their fathers are now—and the free, wholesome comradeship that now holds them together will be gone forever.

Instead, they will share the divisions that curse our grown-up world. The poor ones, as likely as not, will be denouncing the rich ones as economic royalists, and the rich ones will be accusing the poor ones of trying to overturn American institutions.

Most of them will be demanding that Washington do something for them—at the expense, if necessary, of all the others—and wanting to know what the country is coming to if the demand is refused.

X X X

ALL of which is simply to say that the easy, uncritical fellowship of boyhood vanishes as boys become men. Life is still pretty much a devil-take-the-hindmost scramble, and it makes a man forget that he has a community of interest with all his fellow citizens. It is mortally easy to get the feeling that men of a different economic or social class are going to get the better of you, if you don't get the better of them first.

And there is something about the spectacle of these Boy Scouts at Washington that makes one understand that our way of living—or, more accurately, our way of looking at life—with its divisions and its unsleeping suspicions, is badly warped.

Our country happens to need this feeling of solidarity, of common striving for a common goal, about as badly as any country could; yet it has to go to the Boy Scouts to find it.

"Insanity" Defense

ONCE in every six months or so there pops up a murder case to illustrate how cockeyed our system of handling the "insanity defense" really is. The most recent exhibit is Robert Irwin, who confessed to a triple murder in New York and remarked confidently, "I'll just be sent to an asylum for life."

Irwin may well be found insane within the meaning of that term as laid down by our criminal law; yet it would be a broadminded person indeed who did not see something extremely peculiar in the situation. Here is a young man who was at least smart enough to get away from the police, to stay away, and to support himself in comfort. When, at last, an accident tripped him up, he was smart enough to surrender to a newspaper instead of to the police, and to lay the ground-work very cannily for an attempt to prove, in court, that he is not responsible for his acts.

Laymen can easily be pardoned for remarking that sort of thing does not look so frightfully insane.

Tests Usually Required to Determine Cause When Kidneys Fail to Function

(No. 263)

Again an idea of the amount of work that the kidneys do may be obtained from the fact that more than 600 quarts of blood pass through them every day.

This circulation of the blood through the kidneys enables them to perform their work in taking out the waste substances.

More than 97 per cent of the water in the body is of course, promptly passed back into the body so that the average person gets rid of 1½ quarts of fluid a day by way of the kidney.

It is a marvelous mechanism that makes it possible for the kidneys to take out just those substances that are dangerous to life and to pass back into the body those that are necessary for health.

There are so many different forms of kidney disease that it is not really right to speak of it in that way. When a doctor examines a patient about whom there is some doubt as to whether the kidneys are sound, he undertakes a number of examinations to find out what is wrong.

The fluid from each kidney is examined separately. To get this fluid it is necessary to pass a small tube into the ureters from each side where they come into the bladder. The fluid is examined chemically and microscopically.

Moreover, the doctor tests the function of the kidneys by administering various dye substances and testing the extent to which they are passed out of the body by one kidney or the other or by both kidneys working at the same time.

The kidneys may fail in their function due to all sorts of disturbances. They are sometimes damaged by accidental bruises and abrasions. Sometimes they are injured by infections. Sometimes they fail to receive from the blood the nourishment that they should have and as a result begin to change.

It was thought that the passing of albumin from the kidney meant invariably a disease change. Nowadays it is known that albuminuria is not a disease, but a symptom.

Under ordinary conditions protein does not appear in the urine. In some cases exceedingly great muscular work, exposure to severe cold, or the over-eating of protein foods may temporarily result in the appearance of some albumin.

Under these conditions, however, the albumin does not appear in all specimens over a long period of time, but tends to disappear promptly.

Cold moist air feels colder to a person than cold dry air.

Mother Might Whistle Nerves Away; Jazzing Up Routine Works Wonders

Are you physically tired, or nervous-tired, mother? I know better than to say "just nervously tired," because it implies something spurious, and there is nothing counterfeit about the weariness of nerve fatigue.

But what are nerves? They are so many things, it is impossible to answer, for only our Maker knows the truth. They help us to see, hear, and move our muscles, of course, and to sense heat, cold, pleasantness and unpleasantness. If this were all, the definition would be easily settled, but alas, it is not even a beginning.

Perhaps after this, "nerves" become the "soul,"—because now we get into "feelings," the emotions that make or ruin us—love, hate, peace, worry; interest versus monotony, and a thousand others.

Nerve fatigue is a result of mental strain. Just what strain, is your problem. Perhaps longings that cannot come true, perhaps monotony that pulls, or work that is so distasteful you have to fight yourself every day anew to get at it.

Relief Must Come From Self
 As a result you are tired, oh so tired. And you are weary thin and still losing weight. Headaches, poor digestion, and even aches and pains in your hands and feet. As genuine are these afflictions as if you were carrying oceans of infection in your blood stream.

You cannot analyze yourself. Yet no one can really help you but yourself, because all the words in the world and all the medicine will neither remove your problems nor change your feelings.

But you can do this. Shut out the thought of tomorrow with all your might, and live on twenty-four hours today.

If monotony pulls, and half the time in the case of busy women this is the case, you might do a few outrageous things to break the jinx. If it's going to be a relief for a day or two, change the whole house around, cook unbelievable things, and get away from a set routine. Routine is excellent, and planning is the father of efficiency, but when they get too deadly, take a vacation and let efficiency slide for awhile.

Make Game of "Cure"
 Try, if possible, to gain new slant on everything and everybody. Make an effort to cultivate people you dislike. Ask more people to come in. When you are talking to others you are not thinking, or brooding.

Can you sing? No? That's fine. Then sing. Don't hum, but learn the words to a tune or two you like and let it go. Whistle, if it suits you. It keeps up courage.

Don't take yourself too seriously. Say, "I need to forget it all and laugh more." You might surprise yourself. Nerve fatigue results from so many things that we could control, if we tried very, very hard. But don't work at "trying." Make it a game. Try new roads. Get out of the rut of your feelings. Work may not be easier but it may wear a pleasanter face.

It never hurts to risk a little change.

The most celebrated pipe in the world is that which Napoleon presented to one of his officers. Studded with jewels, it was valued at $7500 in the money of that day.

Much Hotter, With Hurricane Wind and Rain Is Latest Weather Bulletin From Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD.—Movies in the making: This is the month of the big wind on the back lot at United Artists. They've got four 12-cylinder Liberty motors and six 9-cylinder airplane engines, all with their propellers aimed at the palm trees and South Seas native houses on the principal set for "The Hurricane."

I don't know the velocity of the wind generated by these machines, but it's the strongest wind into which strong men and women can fight their way. Many takes have been spoiled by people being blown off their feet and rolled back by the rush of the blast.

The palms and thatched houses are securely guyed now because the hurricane isn't supposed to have reached the point of wholesale demolition. When it does, they'll bring up additional wind machines and actually blow down most of the village.

The sequences so far have shown the people on the island making their way from residency, general store and native houses toward the church, a doomed refuge.

All this action takes place from left to right, along the beach, and day after day the native Polynesians and white principals take repeated beatings from wind spray and flying debris.

Many actors get a break; she wears a raincoat and plenty of clothing underneath it. And stunch old C. Aubrey Smith, the priest, has padding under his robes. But most of the other players wear only sarongs.

A tall tower has been built over some of the wind machines, and from it workmen toss debris into the air stream. At perfectly timed intervals they throw palm fronds, leaves, small branches, pieces of netting and finally a woven basket about four feet square.

The basket is heavy, but it carries along the beach like a crazy thing and would knock anybody silly who happened to be in the way.

Other men hold fire hoses into the air stream, and the water at once is converted into a blinding spray. The dust of a hurricane is represented by clouds of stifling sulphur smoke released behind the machines. The whole thing is appalling, nerve-shaking. It is more exciting to watch than to be in because it is possible to stand just out of the palm trees and see the whole panorama of terror.

Hot Weather "Snow"
 On a nearby sound stage they're having a different sort of "very unusual" weather. You'll call it snow. Property men know that it's merely powdered gypsum and cornflakes. What Henry Fonda and Joan Bennett call it can't be printed here.

It's a hot day outside, but much hotter within, under the banks of lights. The Hollywood snow is piled high among the trees and against a mountain backdrop.

Miss Bennett has to wear heavy shoes and clothing, and two overcoats—the outer one fur.

Fonda and the other players fare a little better, but no much. The management has taken pity on 'em to the extent of installing individual air-conditioning machines in their dressing rooms.

But even Miss Bennett, who can't spare it, is losing a pound or two a day.

One of the things that isn't too warm about this picture, titled "I Met My Love Again," is the fireplace in the cabin. To obtain the effect of flickering firelight in the room, they've set up a slanting mirror over the face of which runs a thin stream of water. The water breaks up the reflection of a spotlight so that the rays dance realistically.

In on the Joke

Pleasantest set in Hollywood right now is the one at Warners where they're shooting "The Great Garrick." Everybody seems to be having fun, most of all the director, James Whale, who seems vastly relieved after finishing such a long, grim task as "The Road Back."

This Garrick thing is a costume comedy with Brian Aherne impersonating the celebrated English actor on a visit to France.

The entire company of the Comedie Francaise decides to rib the Englishman, so it takes over the inn where he is to stay. Its members take over all the jobs, too—proprietor, cooks, waitresses, porters and the roles of guests.

They pretend dark intrigues, run berserk with knives, fight duels and generally put on a show calculated to scare the daylight out of Garrick. Only trouble is that he knows about the scheme and vastly enjoys the exciting hoax.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

No Neutrals in Age of Revolt and Riot

In "Night Between the Rivers" (Macmillan; $2.50), R. L. Duffus examines the predicament of the innocent bystander in time of riot and insurrection.

The scene is a pleasant little New York cocktail party which—by some oversight—takes place on the evening that a general strike is called on Manhattan Island.

None of the guests feel that they have any particular stake in the strike. They are, for the most part, members of the middle class and they ask only that employers and workers settle their dispute without bothering them too much. In their innocence, they take it for granted that that will happen.

But it doesn't. The strike and the efforts to repress it create a revolutionary situation, and the innocents get caught in the cogwheels. To some of them it is no more than a nuisance; a suburban couple has to walk instead of taking the subway, and the predatory department store executive finds his designs on a young woman unexpectedly thwarted. But to some of them it is tragical, with violence and sudden death at the end.

Mr. Duffus has told a tense and gripping story, but it seems to me that he lets you off just about where you got on. His characters make much fine talk—a little too fine to sound real, some of it—about violence being the wrong way to settle things; yet they seem to have no alternative suggestion, except an amorphous sort of brotherly love which does not seem to me to jell.

But he is not, after all, so much trying to suggest a solution as to voice a complaint against an age which, settling its troubles violently, refuses to let people stay on the sidelines. That complaint he voices eloquently.

CHUNGKING, China.—(AP)—Crying "wolf" in China is dangerous business.

While 15 servants were traveling on a river junk to meet their master at Chungking, suspicious villagers on the way decided they were robbers and informed the military guard. The boat was met by soldiers who opened fire and killed eight of the servants.

Before the mistake was discovered, the soldiers boarded the junk, chopped off the heads of the victims and carried them to the military officers to claim a reward.

Hempstead Home Agent

By MELVA BULLINGTON

"Have you had your iron today?" That is a question which Hempstead county home demonstration club members who are studying nutrition can answer in the affirmative, for they know that eggs, liver, dried beans and pecans, and leafy vegetables in the diet will provide that necessary element, declares Miss Melva Bullington, home demonstration agent.

Utritional anemia is a dietary deficiency disease which is caused by lack of elements in the diet which are necessary for building hemoglobin, the principle in red blood cells which carries oxygen from the lungs to all parts of the body. Its main constituent iron, according to Miss Gertrude Conant, Extension nutritionist, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

"Spring fever" is also apparently due to a lack of sufficient iron in the winter diet, the nutritionist says.

Egg yolk is one of the best sources of iron, since the large proportion of iron which it contains is utilized by the body 100 per cent. The next best source is liver, whether it be calf, beef, or mutton liver. Other foods valuable for iron content are dried beans and dried peas, says Miss Conant.

Green leafy vegetables, such as kale, spinach, chard, watercress, and lettuce are good sources of iron, although only about 20 per cent is available to the body. Sorghum and ribbon cane syrups are also sources of iron.

Rainbows

I believe that the rainbow ends somewhere. With a pot of gold that shines like a star. Maybe we'll find it some day, who knows? Faith can carry the soul so far. Hush, away with your doubt and fear! We must believe, though the way is long. For the vision beckons so bright and clear. And ever I follow the lilt of a song. I believe that back of each dull, tired face, Something of splendid beauty lies. Where the soul, that wonderful, radiant thing, Hides its shining from mortal eyes. So I will search 'till I find the gleaming. Fairy gold at the rainbow's end. And I will watch for the glory streaming. Bright from the soul of a dearly loved friend.—Selected.

Collected rainbows—The thought came into my mind on Sunday afternoon, when my attention was called to the lovely rainbow that dominated the Eastern horizon. Completely arching the distant vista was this brilliant rainbow, with its colors repeated in the gold tipped tree tops, marigolds, zinnias, and foliage glistening in the sunbeams under a colorful sky—another memory is of a double rainbow appearing at the sunset of a stormy day, cloud masses in the eastern sky looked like darkly tarnished copper, while the silver leaf

Clipper Planes Near Their 100,000 Mile

SAN FRANCISCO—(P)—Transpacific clipper planes dived serenely Sunday night toward a long-sought goal—1,000,000 miles of service flying over the wildest ocean without an accident.

Pan American Airways announced their four big sea-spanning planes would complete the 1,000,000th mile of commercial operation between California and the Orient with the clipper Monday of the Philippine Clipper in Manila.

The planes rolled up a total of 5,622,124 passenger miles during that operation and carried nearly 200 tons of freight, exclusive of air mail.

SUPERSTITION MOUNTAIN

By Owen Arnold

Copyright 1937 NEA SERVICE INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS: CAROLEE COLTER, heroine, Stuart's daughter, "STUART BLAKE," a noted "sage," Stuart Colter's lover, HENRY COLTER, prospector, PAUL, and SILAS COLTER, prospectors' sons, NINA BLAKE, Stuart's sister.

Yesterday's Colters learn that their gold mine is a dud. Nina tells Nina of her love for Stuart.

CHAPTER XVI

STUART BLAKE asked Carolee if he might take her home. He would borrow a horse for her from the Lodge corral, and escort her at least part way up the mountain climb to her cliff eyrie.

"You can't go now," Nina informed them. "She's staying for dinner. Aren't you?"

Carolee smiled in surprise. "Well, I hadn't known it, but—" "Good. Then you are. I may let Stuart ride up with you later. Or—" (to bedevil him) "I may take her home myself!"

Carolee was slightly embarrassed although pleased immensely at the invitation. She had her father and brother to worry about. They were waiting in the old car to leave, even now. She went over to them.

"Dad, I'm going to stay for dinner. Miss Blake asked me." The old man bridled.

"You can't stay." "Why? I will be home before 10 o'clock. Someone will ride to the trail with me. They'll lend me a horse."

"You can't stay," the father repeated, rather sourly.

Carolee bit her lip and looked away. She thought for a moment or two, then came to a quick conclusion.

"I'm sorry, papa, but I have already accepted the invitation, and—I am staying. Wait a minute, now! Let me finish. I have to remind you that Miss Blake is an adequate chaperon, if I needed one. And Stuart himself has never been anything but a gentleman toward me, however much you dislike or distrust him. And—" "What do you know about—" She ignored the interruption and went on.

"—and finally, I found most of the gold you have gotten up here anyway, and I'm 21 years of age. I won't be treated unreasonably!"

SHE uttered this last with a firmness which both men recognized. They knew she meant just what she said. They respected her for it, even if they were angered momentarily.

The old man just looked at her, chewing his tobacco and saying no more.

"You stay, and I'll meet you down at the foot of the trail at 10 o'clock, with yore horse," said Silas, as he stepped on the starter of their old car and pulled away.

What to do with Carolee, if anything, wasn't discussed by her brother and father as they rode glumly along. They loved the girl in their own fashion; they disliked to see her wean away from them, but they knew separation was bound to come some day, some how.

"Can't expect sis never to see no men," Silas suggested once, but his father promptly squelched him: "I'll run you youngsters like I want!" Silas spat, rather contemptuously, out the car window. He didn't much blame Carolee, he told himself.

The road from Superstition Lodge to the foot of the Colters' horse trail, where they regularly stored their car in the bushes, was no more than a set of shallow ruts across the desert soil. It wound interminably in and out among the rocks, dodging clumps of cholla cacti, leading between giant saguaro, ocotillo, prickly pear, and yucca growths.

For about a quarter mile it followed a flat stream bed, dry nine-tenths of the time, directly against a cliff some 300 feet high. The cliff was more than straight up—it actually leaned over the water course, due to the occasional floods that had cut its base away.

They were chugging along there when—SLOW-W-W—right at them, directly in front, a boulder larger than a barrel fell from the cliff!

A mass of loosened earth and rocks followed. Dust enveloped the car.

Of one accord the men shouted warnings, jumped for safety.

The car hit the fallen mass and stalled. It hadn't been traveling fast enough to smash itself against the rock.

SILAS ran back a few yards, looked up at the sky which was still glowing slightly from the sunset.

He jerked out a pistol and fired rapidly at the cliff rim.

"Somebody poked his head over up there!" he called to his dad. Old man Colter was too astonished, and frightened, to act or talk sensibly for a few minutes.

He realized their escape had been miraculous. Soon, though, he darted back to the car and got his own gun, a rifle.

They studied the rim for a long time, craning their necks and peering at it from ambush. They saw no more sign of life.

"That there rock was pushed over!" Silas declared, and his father nodded.

They stalked, silently, around the base and up a canyon that would give them access to the cliff top. But it took more than half an hour and they found nothing when they got there.

STUART and Carolee rode up soon after the two men had climbed back down. They were greatly alarmed at the discovery. It seemed patently an attempt on the Colter men's lives, and Stuart said so.

The old man nodded agreement. The four did a good deal of talking, in fact, and the Colter men finally admitted that they had suspected Stuart of trying to get revenge on them heretofore, and maybe to drive them away from the gold hunt.

"But you was back there at th' Lodge this time," Silas remarked. "We been mixed up, about that. But as shore as th' devil made rattlesnakes, somebody's been doggin' us!"

Stuart had seen cowboys working a good deal of late and he had picked up a trick or two. He carried a strong lariat on his saddle. With it he and his horse "snaked" the biggest rock out of the roadway, the other men and Carolee keeping careful watch of the cliff top meanwhile.

"All clear now," Stuart called gaily. "I'll go back from here. Sure glad you weren't hurt, Mr. Colter, and Silas. This puts a new light on a lot of things, but it leaves a dark spot somewhere just the same. Do you have any idea who's been trying to kill us? Shooting at my dad, and throwing rocks, and—Paul?"

They couldn't guess. Carolee looked helplessly up at him, saddened at the tragic events.

"Well, I have! I have an idea, but I'll have to check on it first. Don't any of you go up there again alone. And I won't be seeing you for a day or two, probably. This business can't go on; we've got to have a showdown."

George Gershwin, Composer, Dead

Noted Song Writer Dies After Illness of Two Weeks

HOLLYWOOD—(P)—George Gershwin, one-time $15 a week song "plugger" who attained sudden fame when Paul Whiteman himself "plugged" the composer's "Rhapsody in Blue" in New York's classic Aeolian Hall, died Sunday after an operation for a brain tumor.

The 38-year-old writer of jazz classics was ill only two weeks. He collapsed at a movie studio where he was writing songs for a musical. Taken to Cedars of Lebanon hospital, he was reported suffering from nervous exhaustion.

Gershwin collapsed again Saturday, at his home. X-ray examinations at a hospital disclosed a brain tumor which had been growing amazingly fast. His physician, Dr. Gabriel Seagull, telephoned for Dr. Walter Dandy of Baltimore, asking him to fly here.

Late Saturday night the composer's condition became extremely grave, and after a consultation of brain specialists an immediate operation was ordered. Dr. Carl Rand performed the surgery.

"Death was due to a cystic tumor of the right temporal lobe of the brain," Dr. Seagull said.

Gershwin never rallied from the operation, an unusually difficult one. Gershwin was working on songs for "Goldwyn's Folies," a movie musical, and had completed five of the nine songs he contracted to write. His brother, Ira, who will have charge of funeral arrangements, probably will complete the lyrics for the movie.

Gershwin's first movie contract with Fox on the picture "Delicious" in 1930 called for $100,000. Later, he was reported to be earning $250,000 a year.

Sour Milk Muffins

(4 to 6 servings)
Sift 1½ cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder and ¾ teaspoon salt into mixing bowl, add 2 egg yolks beaten with ½ cup sugar and 1 tablespoon melted shortening, then add ½ cup spoon soda dissolved in 1 cup lukewarm water and mixed with 1 cup thick sour milk. Mix together, fold in greased muffin tins and bake 15 minutes in hot oven (450 degrees F.).

Blueberry Griddle Cakes

(4 to 6 servings)
Sift together 2 or 3 times 2 cups flour, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon salt, add slowly 1½ cups sour milk. Beat thoroughly with a beater and add 1 cup blueberries. Drop from tip of spoon on clean griddle, cook on one side until puffed and full of bubbles, turn and cook on other side. Serve immediately.

Entire Wheat Muffins

(4 to 6 servings)
Mix 1 cup hot milk with 1 tablespoon shortening, 3 tablespoons molasses and 1½ teaspoons salt. Dissolve 1 yeast cake in ¼ cup lukewarm water and add to milk when milk is lukewarm, with 2½ cups entire wheat flour. Beat well and let rise until double in bulk and bake at 350 degrees F. to 400 degrees F. (that is, from 25 to 30 minutes. This recipe will make bread, also. For bread, bake from 50 to 60 minutes. ## Pepper Martin May Become Pitcher for St. Louis Cardinals

ST. LOUIS—Frank Frisch says that if things get any worse in the St. Louis Cardinals' hurling department he's going to pitch himself.

"I'm not fooling when I say that I'm going to use Pepper Martin soon," asserts the Red Birds' manager.

Martin, the outfielder-infielder, has pitched before.

In 1928, there was an estimated increase of 573,724 church members in the United States despite a decrease of 1470 in the number of churches.

All-Star Game Feats Prove Ruppert Rifles Mightiest Team in Modern Baseball History

Umpire George Barr calls Frank Demaree safe at the plate as the Chicago Cubs' outfielder hits the dirt to beat the St. Louis Cardinals. Catcher Bruce Ogrodowski, upset, is attempting to tag Demaree.

By HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service

As the result of that last edition of the All-Star game, some of the boys are suggesting that the American League draft from the national next season.

"They're saying that Joe Medwick is in the wrong loop," Lou Gehrig cracked something about playing for five more years in the outer wheel when he's through in the junior.

Balance is the most important thing in baseball, which is why the Chicago Cubs now are favored to meet the New York Yankees in the world series this fall.

Next to the Yankees, the Cubs are the most thoroughly balanced team in the game.

Gabby Hartnett is a balance wheel in himself.

Familiar with opposing batsmen, Hartnett, studies young pitchers like Clay Bryant and Clyde Shoun.

Dizzy Dean attested to Hartnett's ability along this line when, following the All-Star game, he ruefully admitted that he failed to heed the big backstop's advice on Joe DiMaggio and Lou Gehrig.

Dean fed them fast balls instead of curves, and it was all over but the shouting.

Sacrifice Warneke for Balance
Ken O'Dea and Johnny Bottarini rounded out the finest catching staff in baseball in Wrigley uniforms.

This to a great measure accounts for the Cubs having the smoothest pitching staff in the majors.

Chicago sacrificed the great right-hander, Lon Warneke, for balance.

The deal with the St. Louis Cardinals gave the Bruins Jimmy Collins, who remade the infield into the most polished in the business.

Chilly Willie Terry admitted that he couldn't put Third Baseman Stanley Hack on the National League All-Stars.

"What do you want me to have, the entire Cub infield?" asked the Cheerless Leader of the Giants.

It wouldn't have been a bad idea. Billy Herman, a star defensive player as well as a batter, rooms with Billy Jurges. He is credited with giving Jurges tips that made that remarkable shortstop a .300 hitter.

Joe Marty came through to round out the Cubs' outfield. Frank Demaree is the batting spark of the outfit, and Augie Kalan again is at home as the leadoff man.

Everything happened to the Cubs in the first month, yet they never were more than five games out of first place.

It will take an avalanche to stop them now.

Not Over Their Heads Now
The All-Star game proved beyond doubt that the Yankees are the greatest team in baseball—greater probably than Connie Mack's champions of 1929, '30 and '31.

In 1936 the Yankees ran away with the American League race to triumph by the spectacular and record margin of 19½ games. "Playing over their heads," scoffed any of the doubters, especially those in their own league. Against the Giants, the Yankees smashed out a world series victory in six games.

In the All-Star game, with five of their key men playing they made it a one-team show, driving in most of the runs, scoring most of them, and supplying the outstanding pitching performance of the day. And in 1937 the Yankees are drawing away from the rest of the league in exactly the same fashion they did one year ago.

This year no charge of lucky breaks can be made against the Yankees. They have suffered a series of injuries and misfortunes enough to knock any other team out of the running.

Monte Pearson, pitching hero of the 1936 series, has hardly hurtled at all this year, due to a sore arm. Johnny Spurgeon Shandler, the promising rookie pitcher, sustained a shoulder injury in June.

Yankees Rumble Right Along
Sore arms not only affected the pitchers. Frank Crosetti has been laid up with an ailing flip. Lou Gehrig broke a finger early in April, but the iron man kept right on playing.

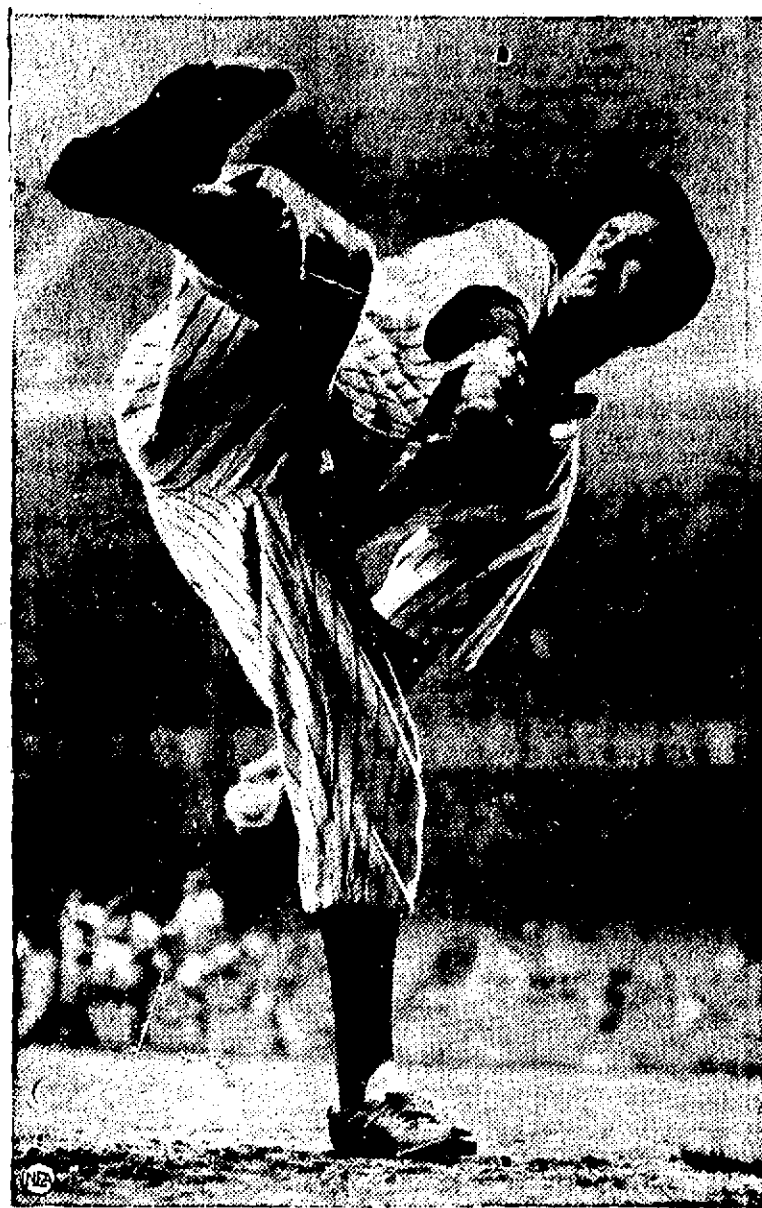

Injuries hit George Solkirk, the brilliant outfielder, twice, while DiMaggio, the greatest center fielder in baseball, missed the first half dozen games in April when he had his tonsils extracted. Jake Powell was out for many weeks due to an appendicitis operation.

Bill Dickey was out of a number of games with an arm bruised. And besides all these injuries, the Yanks missed the service of Charley Ruffing, their No. 1 pitcher, for several weeks while he conducted the longest hold-out of the year.

But still the Yanks prove unstoppable.

This can be attributed to their overpowering batting strength, but more to the fact that the Yankees possess a balance owned by no other team in their league. Balance and a wealth of material—players on the bench or within 24-hour recall who can step into the Yankee organization and carry through.

There ought to be a law against Lou Gehrig playing against those little boys, but balance remains the most important thing in baseball.

Bob Feller Loses Two-Hit Contest

Cleveland Ace Drops Game by Walks and Wild Pitch

DETROIT—(AP)—Bob Feller allowed Detroit only two singles Sunday, but he was lavish with bases on balls and Detroit beat Cleveland in the final game of their current series, three to two.

In addition to the six passes Feller issued he let one Tiger run in on a wild pitch. Home runs by Solters and Trosky accounted for Cleveland's scores. Boos Poffenberger, a Tiger rookie, went the full nine innings, but was little, if any, more effective than Feller.

Umpire Brick Owen was hit on the chin by a foul tip in the third inning. The foul coupled with Detroit's 90-degree temperature forced him from the game.

A walk to White in the fourth inning followed by Rogell's infield out and Greenberg's single produced Detroit's first run. In the sixth with one out, Feller walked White, Rogell and Gehringer and then fanned Hank Greenberg. Pitching to Walker, however, he let fly a wild pitch and White scored again. Feller then fanned Walker.

In the ninth Gehringer and Greenberg walked. Walker forced Greenberg at second, Gehringer going to third. Rudy York then forced Walker at second. An almost certain double play was in sight; but Larry lost his footing as Walker slid into second and Gehringer scored on the play.

LaRance, Williams on Fight Program

Boxing Matches and Little Royal Also Included on Card Here

Speedy LaRance, who last week defeated Buddy Knox in a wrestling exhibition at the South nut street arena, will return Tuesday night to meet Lefty Williams in the feature event, Promoter Maudlin said Monday.

To secure the services of LaRance here this week, Maudlin said he was forced to post a larger guarantee than ever before on any wrestler other than the champion.

Williams, who appeared here two weeks ago, was disqualified because of foul tactics. In signing the contract for a return match, Maudlin said that he made it plain that hard, clean wrestling would be permitted.

Three or four boxing matches and a battle royal will also be included in the program. The fight card will be announced Tuesday afternoon. The show starts at 8:15.

A backward somersault is easier to perform in water than on land. You don't run the risk of breaking your neck, nor do you jar yourself silly if you make a slip.

Lie in the water in a back-sealing position. Draw the knees up to the chest and rise your hands and arms over your head.

Then suddenly bring your hands down backward to your sides in a sweeping stroke.

The head should be tilted back.

By the motion of your hands your body will be pulled under the water. Now rapidly scull with hands and you will rise to the surface, facing in the same direction from which you started the somersault.

Note: The head directs the body, so be sure to keep it tilted until Somersault has been completed, straightening it to rise to the surface.

The greatest advance in REFRIGERATION Since 1920

Air-Conditioning

So New . . . so amazingly different . . . it UPSETS all your ideas of refrigeration. The Three Essentials of Refrigeration for Food Protection

1. Air Circulation, Air Conditioning and Elimination of impurities by the drain pipe
2. Properly controlled humidity.
3. Constant uniform temperature.

Air circulation . . . pure cold air falls from the ice chamber, forcing warm air to the top. Air conditioning is only had in the modern air conditioned ice refrigerator, because the air is washed by the melting ice.

Elimination of Impurities by Drain Pipe. . . . Odors, bacteria spore, other impurities and gases, are absorbed by the water film on the surface of the melting ice and are eliminated by the drain pipe. This is what stops up your drain pipe. These impurities if not eliminated will seriously affect your health.

Properly Controlled Humidity. . . . Only the air conditioned ice refrigerator has controlled humidity . . . air is neither too dry nor too moist. United States Bureau of Standards recommend 70 per cent humidity.

Cold is not enough . . . a uniform temperature between fifty and fifty-five is better than a cold varying temperature. Only the modern ice conditioned ice refrigerator has a constant, uniform temperature.

300 Fliers Set to Hunt for Amelia

Lexington's Planes Are Prepared for Search of South Pacific

HONOLULU, (P)—The Aircraft Corps Lexington Sunday prepared its 300 planes and sixty-two planes for the search for Amelia Earhart.

Heading in the approximate direction of Howland Island but with its exact location undetermined, the carriers' 300 officers and men concentrated their search on detailed plans of a high speed 200,000 square mile sweep of the equatorial Pacific. Fliers aboard the battleship Colorado confessed they had lost hope after four days of scanning the Phoenix Islands with their three catapult planes. The Phoenix group had been considered the most likely place of finding Earhart and her navigator, Capt. Frederick J. Noonan, who disappeared July 2 in an attempt to fly 2,570 miles

"Mister Fiermonte" Goes to Jail

When he was a prize fighter, Enzo Fiermonte was "Enzo" to the newspaper men; but as husband of wealthy Mrs. Madeline Force Astor Dick Fiermonte, he demands respect, by golly. Even when wearing handcuffs and being led to jail at Jamaica, L. I., to serve a five-day sentence for speeding. As he left court (at right above) in company with another prisoner, he demanded reporters address him as Mister Fiermonte and socked a cameraman who got familiar enough to take a picture.

from New Guinea to Howland Island. Capt. Wilhelm H. Friedell of the Colorado tentatively ended the battleship's search of the Phoenix area and left the island group astern to head for a rendezvous with the destroyers Drayton, Lamson and Cushing about 350 miles northeast of Howland Island. The Colorado still was in position to send out its planes, however, and it was said they possibly might make a final flight Monday.

The catapult planes searched virtually the whole Phoenix area but found nothing to bolster hopes for the fliers' safety.

One of the planes, flying over Sydney Island in that group, reported sighting letters scooped in the sand spelling dozens of Polynesian words. The fliers, however, said there was no sign of life and they discounted the possibility that the markings in the sand could be related to the Earhart plane.

Speeding ahead of the Lexington, the three destroyers planned to refuel from the Colorado about 10:30 a. m. Monday and then take up searching positions Tuesday morning to assist the Lexington.

The Lexington reported its position 336 miles south of Honolulu Saturday night. Although capable of making thirty-three knots, nearly thirty-eight miles an hour, she throttled her engines down to eighteen knots to conserve fuel.

How Homebuilding Rides Upward On the Tail of the Rental Kite

By NEA Service

The relationship between rising rents and increasing homebuilding are well shown by the accompanying chart compiled by the Cleveland Trust Co.

Home-building is again increasing after being long dormant, and the reason apparently is the same reason that led to the building boom of the mid-twenties—higher rents. When there is a chance that it will be cheaper to build than to rent, or when rents are high enough to make it profitable to build, the building boom begins.

The above diagram compiled by the Cleveland Trust Co., shows some of the relationships between costs of residential construction, rents and amount of residential building from 1913 to 1937. The average of each figure from 1913 to 1937 is taken as 100. The chart shows how rising rents compared to building costs brought the building boom of the mid-twenties, and how both are rising today.

It is able to build for renting, then people will build, and not otherwise, the chart seems to indicate. The heavy solid line of the chart shows the dollar value of permits for new residential building each year in 257 cities. The dotted line shows the level of house rents as reported by the National Industrial Conference Board. The dashed line shows the cost of building a six-room house, computed from the Boeckh indexes. In each case the average from 1913 through 1936 is taken as 100. The 1937 points are based on the figures for the first quarter of this year.

The post-war building boom was partly caused by war-stimulated shortages and the expansion of suburban housing due to more automobiles, but the cause of the real boom of the mid-twenties is evidently in the rise of rents above construction costs. After 1928, when the level of rents fell below the cost of new building, the extreme building slump of the depression began.

At the present time, with rents again rising faster than costs, a rapid expansion of home construction is again under way.

West Virginia Is Scene of Floods

Six Sections Begin Cleaning Up After Creeks Go on Rampages

WHEELING, W. Va.—(P)—Six flood-weary West Virginia communities began mopping-up operations again after two surging creeks flooded homes and business houses and caused damage which the Wheeling Intelligencer estimated at $500,000.

County Health Commissioner R. M. Peddicord said there was no loss of life. He estimated between 300 and 350 families were forced to flee to the hills when the creeks tore down through the narrow valleys.

Three miles of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad tracks were washed out or undermined, and a small railroad trestle over Little Wheeling creek was swept down the stream. Trains along the Ohio river division were rerouted over the Pennsylvania lines.

Tridelfia, Elm Grove, Valley Grove, Point Mills, Roney's Point and Majorsville, all towns north of here, were isolated Saturday after a rain of 2.20 inches in a little less than three hours. For more than an hour the normally-placed creeks poured between three and five feet of water through the Triadelphia business section.

At Elm Grove, more than 50 people were marooned on a bridge. They were taken over in police boats.

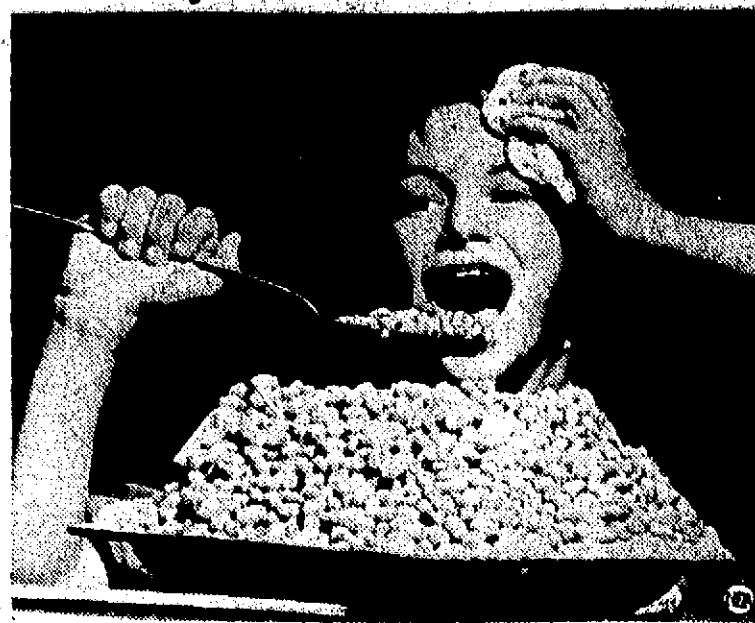

Five small houses were torn from their foundations and swept down the creeks, which merge near Wheeling to form Big Wheeling creek.

A dozen men, forming a chain, rescued Mrs. Hubert May and her two small children, David and Shirley, from the porch top of their home near Tridelfia. The creek swirled the house from its base and tossed it against a bridge pier at McGraw's Run.

Two hundred diners in an Elm Grove restaurant were trapped by the water. They climbed upon the tables.

More than 100 Boy Scouts ran to nearby hills from their summer camp. More than 50 automobiles were abandoned along the Wheeling creek road, their occupants forced to flee. The West Virginia Natural Gas company plant at Majorsville was flooded. Service was suspended. State police said several small foot-bridges also were washed out.
